

Psychosocial Risk Prevention & Anti-Harassment Policy (2024)

Adopted after the opinion of the Committee for Prevention and Protection at Work (CPPT) of 10 September 2024.

1. Commitment

Tectonic does not tolerate violence, moral harassment or sexual harassment at work, whether by colleagues, managers, clients or suppliers.

2. Definitions

As defined by the Law of 4 August 1996 on well-being at work (art. 32ter): moral harassment is a set of several similar or different abusive conducts, external or internal to the company, occurring over a certain period, which have the purpose or effect of undermining the personality, dignity or integrity of a worker, endangering their job or creating an intimidating, hostile, degrading, humiliating or offensive environment.

3. Who to contact

- Person of trust (internal): Nadia Benali, HR – informal procedure only.
- Prevention adviser for psychosocial aspects: PreviSafe Services (external) – informal and formal procedures.
- HR managers and line managers are not part of the procedure and must refer the employee to the prevention adviser.

4. Procedures

4.1 Informal request: listening, advice, conciliation or intervention with a third party.

4.2 Formal request for psychosocial intervention: filed with the prevention adviser after a mandatory personal interview. The adviser analyses the situation, hears the parties and witnesses, and issues an opinion with recommended measures to the employer. The employer informs the parties of the measures it intends to take.

5. Protection against retaliation

An employee who files a formal request for psychosocial intervention for harassment, or who testifies, is protected: the employer may not terminate the employment relationship or unilaterally change working conditions for reasons related to the request, during 12 months after filing (or until the end of court proceedings). If the protection is breached, the employee can request reinstatement or claim an indemnity of 6 months' gross salary.

6. Confidentiality

All information shared in the procedures is confidential.

Catherine Lemaire, HR Director

